

Community Rules

Respectful Communication

This is a supportive community of park leaders and advocates and our goal is to foster a welcoming space where parks and recreation resources and issues can be shared and discussed. Please be respectful and avoid threatening or abusive language, as well as false or harmful statements about individuals, organizations, or products. Any content that could be considered libel is strictly prohibited.

Other Rules to Ensure a Positive User Experience

- This forum is not to be used for self-promotion or promotion of any business, product, or service.
- Please ensure that your comments are relevant to the topic at hand. If you wish to start a new topic, please start a new thread.
- Please avoid political commentary, though you are welcome to discuss how specific local, state, or federal policies impact your work, as long as such comments are relevant to the discussion.

We reserve the right to withhold or remove any content that violates these standards and, if necessary, take further action to protect our members and community integrity.
